

Co-production combines Traditional and local knowledges and western science to produce standardized reproducible products that are adaptable and responsive.

This pilot project resulted in increased local support for responsible monitoring and management of isug'in in the Pribilof Islands. The keys to success we identified were having the right collaborators in the room from the beginning of collaboration; preparing SOP/ SOG to ensure repeatability of surveys, using the right platform for the mission and environment, and having a capable pilot and observer crew that were confident and fully supported in carrying out missions.
